“ When I was young Lewis lived and worked in Indianapolis, yet returned to Jamestown as often as possible. And he always seemed to have a high performance car to do it in. A couple of those trips I rode with him, curled up in the back seat as he whipped the car to and fro across the narrow winding backroads...the tires screaming through the blackness of a southern Kentucky night. He just wanted to get "home." Jamestown, Kentucky was always where his heart lie.
